“If you get Sohoitis you will stay there always, day and night and get no work done ever.
You have been warned.”

Tambimbuttu, editor of Poetry London,
to writer Julian McLaren Ross c.1950

The inhabitants of Soho have ranged from aristocrats to barrow boys, from artists, writers and master craftsmen to porn kings, pimps and prostitutes. This melting pot, fed by a constant stream of immigrants over the centuries - from French Huguenots, Italians, Greeks and Germans to Russian and Polish Jews - continues to intoxicate those who crave a life touched by eccentricity, indulgence and freedom from mundanity.

TAMBIMBUTTU'S WARNING STILL HOLDS TRUE TODAY - SUCCUMB TO SOHOITIS AND NEVER LOOK FORWARD.

The Sohemian Society invite you to an evening with Judith Summers,

Soho historian and author of Soho - a History of London's Most Colourful Neighbourhood to recognise your affliction.

Thursday 18th March From 7.30pm
The Wheatsheaf Pub (private room upstairs)
25 Rathbone Place W1

Admittance £5 (payable on the door)
